The Many Adventures of Whoshadow and Charmcast

by UnknownBlackHand

Category: Doctor Who, How to Train Your Dragon
Genre: Adventure, Humor
Language: English
Characters: Hiccup, OC, TARDIS, Toothless
Status: In-Progress
Published: 2015-12-20 03:45:47
Updated: 2015-12-20 03:45:47
Packaged: 2016-04-27 11:31:01
Rating: T
Chapters: 1
Words: 1,918
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: Two Time Lords had fled Galifrey during the Time War in their own TARDIS. After over twenty years of living in the Viking Archipelago they rediscover their TARDIS, and our favorite HtTYD characters go on adventures. (See 'The Tale of Whoshadow' or my Dragonstone stories for further context)

The Many Adventures of Whoshadow and Charmcast

This is a spinoff to my Dragonstone trilogy ('Resurfaced and a Dragonstone', 'The Dragonstone Tribe', and 'Of Claws and Dragonstones'). However, the story relates more to the backstory of one of my fan-inspired OC's, 'The Tale of Whoshadow', it tells Whoshadow's story of how she came to Berk and it leads through the plots of the first two Dragonstone stories, told from her perspective. If you're worried about having to read any of these stories to get what is going on, do not worry; there is a recap in this chapter of the events that have transpired in those stories.

Chapter I: The Relic from Galifrey

Flying over the sea, Whoshadow, Toothless, Stormfly, Meatlug, and their riders followed another Night Fury. Her name was Charmcast, a wild but friendly dragon blue-black in coloration. In fact, Charmcast has a very close history to Whoshadow, a large and insane Skrill with a hatred of pears that burns with great passion.

Whoshadow's rider is a lovely dame named: Claudette, she used to be a prim and proper princess, like one out of a fairytale, but fate wasn't the kindest to her. After events transpired with a villain by the name of Drago Bludvist, the man sought to avenge his defeat on Berk by seeking out an object called a Dragonstone. A Dragonstone is a magical gem that can only be formed when several different breeds of dragons fly in a circle breathing out whatever projectile they produced, be it: fire, lava, water, or acid. The creation of a Dragonstone is completed when a Night Fury discharges a plasma blast. Now, after Drago collected one of these rare gems, he traveled about the world with his Bewilderbeast to take control of more dragons. Well, Drago came upon Claudette's dragon-guarded castle, he defeated the dragon, and when he didn't come to retrieve her from her tower as she had expected, Claudette went out to confront him, but when Drago rejected her, she was offended, and touched the Dragonstone adorned in Drago's breastplate; the power of the Dragonstone discharged into her, and she turned into a golden dragon with a long neck and arrow-tipped tail and four legs, a standard fairytale dragon called a Guardian. It was after her transformation where Drago decided to take her with him after all.

Claudette served Drago's army of dragons when he challenged Berk for the second time. During the battle, she faced Astrid and ended up cutting her right foot off. However, at the end of the battle, Drago's Dragonstone betrayed him, turned him into a small dragon, and Whoshadow ended up devouring him. He gave her a horrendous stomachache though, and so she had to barf him back out! At any rate, once they found out that Claudette was a princess trapped in a dragon's body, they turned her back into a human and she had fallen in love with Fishlegs. To help herself turn from prim-and-proper princess, Claudette used ink to dye her golden hair black, which helped to give her green eyes a burning acidic look when she went into battle.

When she returned to human form, Claudette soon found out that Whoshadow was the Skrill that devoured the man that turned her into a dragon and had enslaved her. On that basis, they bonded with each other.

Astrid eventually forgave Claudette for cutting off her foot, and though the incident is a thorn in their relationship, they actually got along fairly well, and Astrid's prosthetic does little to hinder her mobility.

As far as Astrid's relationship with Hiccup was concerned, well they got married and soon had a daughter, named Anora. However, during Astrid's pregnancy, Toothless' daughter, named Midnightfire and her mother is a blue Night Fury named Sapphire, panicked when Astrid wanted to pick her up and turned Astrid into a Stormcutter. Astrid spent enough time as a dragon for her unborn child to develop a couple draconic characteristics. For one thing, Anora wasn't born the typical way a Viking is born; she hatched out of an egg for one. She also has the power to transform into a Stormcutter. Anora also has draconic eyes, and a permanent 'necklace' of Stormcutter scales.

So Hiccup and Toothless both have mates and daughters. Though Midnightfire is a bit of a troublemaker.

Toothless had to impress his mate, Sapphire, in order to actually mate with her. So he demonstrated that he was a good Alpha by creating a Dragonstone with his following dragons. Such a feat can only be done if the nest has a good Alpha. Then, Toothless gave the resulting gem to Hiccup. He later used the Dragonstone's powers of healing to restore Toothless' missing fin, allowing him to have romantic flights with his mate now.

A lot of things are new for Hiccup. Yes, he is married and a father now, but he is also known as 'the Dragon Chief' back at home and among his allies, and after Toothless had created the Dragonstone, that title became more and more literal. Several months after Berk had defeated Drago Bludvist for a second time, another villain decided to seek revenge. This one was Dagur the Deranged; he had escaped from prison and sought vengeance on Hiccup. He started off by befriending another powerful Alpha dragon, a Black Typhoon (half the size of a Red Death, able to shoot plasma, lightning, and deliver wing blasts that can topple a Bewilderbeast, a Strike class dragon), with her help, Dagur actually used her powers to separate Hiccup from his Dragonstone and then Toothless' saddle. As he fell, he caught the stone, but not in time for it to save him when he fell to his death. However, by the powers of divinity, and the stone, Hiccup was restored to life, and Loki took him as one of his draconic children. Now Hiccup's Dragonstone lives within him, he has a patch of black scales that resembles a tattoo of a Night Fury silhouette, and in resemblance to his daughter, he also has draconic eyes. Hiccup can also assume the form of a Night Fury at will, but there are some days when he _must_ become a dragon, and if he doesn't transform on his own will, then the night will do it for him.

That is about all that a reader needs to know now.

Charmcast finally landed on a new island, and as soon as Claudette had dismounted, Whoshadow and Charmcast began exploring, while the others took in the sights.

"This is it, Charmcast! You were right, this is our old island!" Whoshadow declared.

"Now all we have to do is find _it_." Charmcast replied. They looked over their backs to be sure that the others weren't listening in. Then Charmcast looked Whoshadow in the eyes and spoke: "Should we really turn our backs from this? I mean, you have your mate, Vengeance, and your children: Vastra, Enya, and Thorn. You also have a rider and her mate too. We're living a happy, safe, and yet an adventurous life with them."

"Charmy, Charmy, Charmy, I merely wish to examine _it_ and see if we can bring it to Berk. These Vikings won't be able to use it, they're not advanced enough, and we can always lock the door. Still we are Time Lords, still, it's in our nature to travel, and we can always return to the moment of when we left." Whoshadow replied.

"I understand, but what if we have toâ€¦ you knowâ€¦ _regenerate_ before their eyes? How are we going to explain that?"

"I suppose we'll have to tell them the truth and see if they can accept it."

Hiccup wandered about, until he saw something out of place. It looked like a small hut, but the wood was blue and he couldn't quite tell who made it. He tried the door, and it opened!

"WHOA!" He exclaimed. Whoshadow and Charmcast looked up, and saw that Hiccup was circling the strange blue hut and then peeked inside it again, and then he announced: "Take a look at this! This hut is bigger on the inside than the outside!"

"Hiccup, don't be silly, that would be impossible!" Fishlegs replied, but nevertheless, the group advanced to the strange hut, but Whoshadow and Charmcast tried to drive them away from it. It was, after all, _their_ strange blue hutâ€¦ â€¦ It was a TARDIS!

"Whoshadow, what is this about? Do you know something about that hut?" Hiccup asked.

"It's dangerous, now get away from it!" She growled.

Yet while Whoshadow was focused on Hiccup, Claudette and Astrid snuck past her and entered the strange blue hut, only to discover that Hiccup was right, it was impossibly larger on the inside than it was on the outside, and they ventured deeper inside it.

"Whoshadow! The girls have gotten past you!" Charmcast called out.

"No!" She cried out, and they both ran inside the strange blue hut with the rest of the company following in after them. The doors shut behind them and the first thing Fishlegs noticed was a panel with buttons, knobs, and levers. He couldn't resist testing them, and then pulling the largest lever, and starting the motors of the TARDIS!

"NO! DO YOU REALIZE WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?!" Whoshadow shouted. The group huddled together, and when the engines stopped Hiccup finally asked: "Whoshadow, what do you know about this place?"

"Perhaps we should tell them aboutâ€¦ you know what." Charmcast suggested.

Whoshadow drooped her head and wings and told them: "The first thing that you need to know about this machine that we stand in is that, like us, it is not of this world."

The whole group, including the dragons, took a step back.

"We are not ordinary dragons, in fact, Charmcast and I used to look very much like humans, but we have two hearts, and when we appear to have been killed, we assume a new form and we are completely healed. This healing process is called: 'Regenerating'."

"So, how did you become dragons?" Hiccup asked.

"Our world was at war with a vile race of invaders from yet another world, until one night, a man decided that enough was enough. He wrote 'No More' in a wall, and stole an identical machine like this one. I noticed this, and took Charmcast to steal this one, for the man ended the war by destroying our planet to destroy the race that was attacking us! Charmcast, the man, and I are the last of our race. We are Time Lords, and this machine is our way of traveling through time and space! We tried several places, and developed a fear of pears along the way, and when we landed on this spot about twenty-five years ago, this machine short-circuited, and we regenerated into dragons after we had previously gone out and seen a couple of them. So we are alien, time-traveling, space-exploring, dragons, and this machine is what our race calls a TARDIS, our world was called Galifrey, and the man who destroyed it has renamed himself 'The Doctor'! Now, thanks to Fishlegs, you are no longer at the time and place you should be!"

"Where, or when are we?" Claudette asked.

"How about we step outside and look? It has been too long since we've last gone on one of these journeys, and as Time Lords, we should be going on trips like these." Charmcast suggested. With the rest of the group excited now, Whoshadow sighed and agreed to step back outside.

End
file.